In leadership, what appears to be a contradiction of choice - two opposing ideas - often turns out to be universally true and a powerful way of living a full authentic life.

Not only can we be both tough and kind, brave and scared, vulnerable and fierce, powerful and powerless, idealistic and profitable we actually need to embrace this leadership paradox of 'being both' to grow and thrive.

It is the same with change. While we need to continually adapt to an uncertain world that is changing radically, we also need to hold true to how we treat ourselves, while leading our people and workplaces. It is these leadership principles that remain the same and do not change.

It is not about settling for 'either/or' it is about embracing the duality of AND. That is the Leadership Paradox, living and leading with two seemingly contradictory forces or ideas at the same time.

"The test of a first-rate intelligence is the ability to hold two opposed ideas in the mind at the same time, and still retain the ability to function." - F. Scott Fitzgerald
